

Modern Grantmaking: Cross-Sector Conversation

Facilitators and Authors

Gemma Bull was Funding Strategy Director for The National Lottery Community Fund, which awards £600 million annually. Her responsibilities included leading hundreds of people and driving a redesign of the organisation's grantmaking. Previously she was a Managing Director at Leonard Cheshire Disability and Head of Innovation at Save the Children. She now specialises in supporting organisations to innovate, improve and collaborate.

Tom Steinberg is a nonprofit CEO turned grantmaker. He founded civic tech pioneers mySociety and worked at the UK Prime Minister's Strategy Unit before leading digital transformation at two of the UK's largest institutional funders, including the Heritage Fund. Tom is an Ashoka Fellow, the co-director of an education project based at the Harvard Kennedy School, and a board member at the International Consortium of Investigative Journalists.
