

ABOUT THE SCREENWRITER

Mike Ede is an award-winning screenwriter based in Regina, Saskatchewan, where he lives with his very patient wife, and son—both of whom have accepted that Mike's brain is now 85% story ideas, with 10% going toward Managing Operations teams and the other 5% going toward useless pop culture trivia.

He learned early that great writers aren't born... they're rewritten. So, during the global lockdown, while most people were baking sourdough, Mike finally listened to his wife's gentle-but-firm nudging and turned his screenwriting dream into a full-time obsession.

Six years later, he's written more than twenty scripts across all genres—because apparently sticking to one is for quitters. His work has been recognized around the world, earning prestigious awards from festivals such as Days of the Dead, The Thing in the Basement Horror Fest, Hellifax Horror Fest, Red Movie Awards, Chicago Script Awards, Digital Griffix, and Montreal Shorts, to name a few. He's also racked up finalist nods at many others like; HorrorHound, Houston Comedy Film Fest, Austin Under the Stars, Oregon Screams, HorrOrigins, FilmQuest, and boy does he have the laurels to prove it!

Mike recently completed his first paid writing gig, adapting a popular 2000's novel A Viral Limit into a screenplay that's now being shopped throughout the industry. His horror short GAUNT will be his first script to hit the screen in the summer of 2026. Inspired by a very real, very unsettling hospital experience following heart surgery in 2023, GAUNT begins with Mike's favorite greeting to new readers: "Welcome to my nightmare."

He's also a published screenwriter, with his ever-growing Tv Series JACK'D and many other works of his available on Amazon in paperback and Kindle. Keep an eye out for him at festivals—he loves meeting the people who read (and survive) his stories.

Mike continues to crank out fresh, exciting work at a suspiciously rapid pace, quickly becoming a name to watch in the screenwriting world.
